Listening transcript — Part A

Dan: IT support, Dan speaking.

Freya: Hi Dan, it's Freya. I'm working from home today, and I'm having problems with my video calls. The picture keeps freezing, and people can't hear me properly.

Dan: OK. Are you using the wi-fi or a cable?

Freya: The wi-fi. The router is downstairs, and I'm sitting in my bedroom upstairs.

Dan: That's probably the problem. Wi-fi signals get weaker if they go through walls and floors. Can you move closer to the router?

Freya: Not really. My children are watching TV in the living room, right next to it.

Dan: I see. Is anyone else using the internet at the moment?

Freya: Yes, I think my son is playing an online game.

Dan: That uses a lot of bandwidth. If he stops the game during your call, the picture will be much better. Another option is a powerline adapter. It sends the internet signal through the electrical wires in your house, so you get a wired connection upstairs.

Freya: That sounds good. Where can I get one?

Dan: We keep some in the IT office. If you come in tomorrow, I'll give you one.

Freya: Great. For now, I'll ask my son to stop playing. Thanks, Dan.

Listening transcript — Part B

Laura: Welcome to Tech Today. I'm Laura. This week, the national rail company is introducing its new mobile app, RailGo, and lots of passengers are already using it. Here's what it does.

Laura: First, you can buy tickets on the app, and the ticket appears as a QR code on your phone. If you show the code at the gate, the gate opens automatically, so you don't need a paper ticket.

Laura: Second, the app shows live train times. If your train is late, the app sends you a message straight away. It also tells you which platform your train is leaving from.

Laura: Third, the app uses your location to find the nearest station. This is very useful when you're visiting a new city.

Laura: The app is free, and it works on both Android and Apple phones. It needs about 80 megabytes of space. One warning, though: the app uses GPS a lot, so it can reduce your battery life. If you're going on a long journey, take a charger with you. That's all for today.

Speaking

2.5 points

Các bài mẫu là gợi ý tham khảo, không phải đáp án đúng duy nhất. Part 1 có câu hỏi mở và không có bài mẫu trong bộ dữ liệu.

Part 1 (S1)

Answer the three questions. Speak for 30–45 seconds for each question.

Suggested time: 45 seconds per question.

1. How do you usually use the internet for your studies, and what are you using it for this week? Use the present simple for habits and the present continuous for things that are happening now or this week.

2. What happens if you turn on flight mode on your phone? What will you do if your phone's storage is full next week? Use zero and first conditional sentences (If…, the phone… / If…, I will…).

3. Describe a person who often helps you with technology. Use relative clauses with who, which or that (She's a friend who…, It's a laptop that…).

Part 2 (S2)

Explain some email terms. Speak for 1–1.5 minutes.

Suggested time: 90 seconds.

A new colleague has never used email at work. Explain what each part of an email in the cues is and why it is useful. Use relative clauses with which, that or who (The recipient is the person who…, An attachment is a file which…).

- subject line
- recipient
- copy (cc)
- attachment
- signature

Required language: Relative clauses with which, that or who: The recipient is the person who…, An attachment is a file which….

Sample response

> Let me explain the main parts of an email. The subject line is the short line at the top which tells people what the email is about. You should always write a clear one. The recipient is the person who receives your email, so you type their address in the 'To' box. A copy, or cc, is for people who need to know about the message but don't need to reply. An attachment is a file that you send with the email, for example a report or a photo. Be careful with large attachments, because some servers don't accept them. Finally, the signature is the text which appears at the end of every email. It shows your name, your job title and your phone number, so customers know how to contact you.

Part 3 (S3)

Deal with the situation. Speak for 1–1.5 minutes.

Suggested time: 90 seconds.

You are phoning the IT helpdesk because your web browser is behaving strangely today. Explain what you usually do with the browser and what is happening now. Use the present simple for your normal routine, the present continuous for what is happening at the moment, and state verbs in the simple form (I don't know…, I need…, I want…).

- normal routine: open the company intranet every morning / use the browser for online orders
- now: the order page is showing everything in the wrong place
- now: the Submit button isn't working / the browser is running very slowly with twenty tabs open
- you don't know what is wrong / you need the order page for a customer today

Required language: Present simple for routines: I usually open…, I use…; Present continuous for things happening now: The browser is showing…, Pages are loading…; State verbs in the simple form: I don't know…, I need…, I want….

Sample response

> Hi, this is Mai from the sales department. I'm having a problem with my browser today. Normally, I open the company intranet every morning, and I use the browser all day for customers' online orders. It usually works perfectly. But this morning, the order page is showing everything in the wrong place: the pictures are covering the text, and the prices are at the bottom. Also, the Submit button isn't working, so I can't send any orders. The browser is running very slowly too, but I have about twenty tabs open, so maybe that's part of the problem. I don't know what is wrong, and I need the order page today, because a customer is waiting for a delivery. Could someone check it for me, please?
